

Supporting Engagement for the Hardest to Reach: Opportunities for young people and adults

WEDNESDAY 12 OCTOBER 2011 | LEEDS

In order to provide job opportunities for all and create a more competitive and sustainable economy, Europe needs a highly skilled workforce able to meet current and future challenges. To make this happen, we need to effectively forecast future trends and match the right skills with the right jobs.

The seminar will also explore the possible development of an EU Skills Passport and VET alumni scheme, both of which will help improve the future prospects of our students.

Supporting Engagement for the Hardest to Reach Programme content

All across Europe, Colleges are starting to think of ways they can use their individual experiences of projects to work together to tackle barriers that prevent socio-economically disadvantaged and vulnerable young people and adults from continuing their education and securing solid employment prospects.

This seminar will bring all of these ideas together and help share best practice.

Who should attend this seminar?

- Senior Managers with a responsibility for learner recruitment
- Curriculum & Quality staff
- Business Development Managers
- International Managers

This complimentary seminar is subsidised by the EU Lifelong Learning Programme

Seminar programme

This seminar will feature input from both UK and Dutch Colleges.
